Stordalen – 4,2 km; Tyskvei 2 – 5,7 km; Bunkershaugen (War ruins) – 6,6 km

In Stordalen in the heart of Signaldalen you can experience the same roads and paths built during World War II by the German occupation. There are traces of the war, including bunkers. Well visible is Bunkershaugen. Here are several German bunkers. If lucky, you will see the rhododendron plant Lapland rosebay with its purple flowers. Signaldalen community association has erected information signs that tell about activity in the area during the war. On the trip you get a fantastic view towards Sweden and Finland.

The German Occupation Roads

Trail description

From the parking lot at the intersection of Parasdalen and Stordalen, all three trails start at the same service road and are well marked. Towards Stordalen the terrain is relatively flat. South of the river, Tyskvei 2 snakes through the terrain. Approaching Bunkershaugen, the community group has built a new bridge over Stordals river, called "Tyskbrua", in the same place that the Germans once built one. There are trim caches at Bunkershaugen and in Stordalen. After the bridge you start on a demanding ascent that levels out towards the end. The cache is located at the top of the road in the vicinity of four bunkers.
